

ATOMIC COWBOY★

Final Marketing Plan

By Ryan Reiser, Wes Garrett, Raul Fierro, Sam Keegan

Product/Service Overview

- Established in 2004
- Atomic Cowboy is a small Colorado-based restaurant chain offering versatile, yet class American-based menu for breakfast, lunch, and dinner.
- Unique sci-fi and western-themed ambiance provides a distinct dining experience.

Mission Statement

- “A place for anyone looking to pair good times with really, really good food. We don’t ever put labels or restrictions on who we are or what we offer, because truth be told, we don’t care much for rules.”

Keys to Success

- Atomic Cowboy's big selling point is the versatility in selling breakfast items in the morning and shifting towards more traditional foods in the afternoon.
- This creates a competitive edge against local competitors such as Woody's Pizzeria, which does not offer breakfast options.
- Additionally, Atomic Cowboy's massive pizzas give them a unique menu that cannot be found anywhere else nearby.

Current Market Situation

- Entirely domestically based and operated
- Increasing competition because of the business environment
- Decreasing potential growth and revenues
- Lack of electronic access and loyalty system compared to competition

Market Description

- Atomic Cowboy targets the low-medium priced restaurant market, with a further focus on the pizza and sports bar markets.
- Demographics: College students, professionals, and families.
- Customers expect low prices and high food value
- Given Atomic Cowboy's domestic focus, they do not have to deal with worries in trade regulations, economic infrastructure, or sociocultural factors unless they expand internationally.

Competitors Analysis

Highest Grossing Sports Car Chains (US)

1. Buffalo Wild Wings
2. Dave & Buster's
3. Hooters
4. Twin Peaks
5. Miller's Ale House

Highest Grossing Pizza Chains (US)

1. Dominos Pizza
2. Pizza Hut
3. Little Caesars
4. Papa John's Pizza
5. Marco's Pizza

- Atomic Cowboy combats competition through their unique menu selections and restaurant culture
- Atomic Cowboy has difficulty competing with the prices of its larger competitors due to Atomic's small size, but attempts to make up for this in terms of food and restaurant quality
- Woody's Pizza is Atomic Cowboy's most direct competitor due to their proximity and reputation at least for the Golden location

SWOT Analysis

Strength • Versatile Menu • Unique Branding • Established loyalty and community	Weakness • Small Business with limited locations in Colorado • Pricier than other competitors
Opportunities • Investing into taking the business into a larger market • Expanding the menu to be more than a local pizzeria • Opening more franchises to expand the business quicker	Threats • Pizzeria market is highly competitive, • Customers might want a lower price pizza • Increasing Economic and Political Costs

Objectives

Using the SMART model :

- Specific: Expand to 2 new locations outside of Denver (specifically college towns)
- Measurable: Increase total revenue by 5%-10% over the next 2 years.
- Achievable: Use customer loyalty to help grow more locations.
- Relevant: Expansion aligns with the company values
- Time-bound: Target a new market by 2027 (out of state expansion)

Targeting Strategy and Value Proposition

Targeting Strategy: (Market Segmentation & Customer Focus)

- Demographic Segmentation (Who):
College students, professionals, and families
- Geographic Segmentation (Where):
Urban areas like Denver and Kansas City
- Behavioral Segmentation (Why):
Memorable and themed dining, Customers looking for a late-night or early-morning dining option

Value Proposition: (Why customers choose Atomic Cowboy)

- A unique experience, high quality food, and focuses on two different target markets everyday utilizing late-night or early-morning dining options

Positioning Statement: (How Atomic Cowboy is different from competitors)

- Creates an atmosphere that keeps customers returning and wanting to experience Atomic Cowboy more frequently

Product/Service Strategy

- Unique Branding & Atmosphere - differentiation strategy (using a Sci-fi/Western theme making it stand out from its competition)
- Versatile Menu - product differentiation (having breakfast, lunch, and dinner attracts more target markets)
- Community Engagement – student discounts and loyalty programs - relationship marketing (building long term customer relationships and keep consumers coming back)
- Quality Over Price - customer value-based pricing (customers pay for the experience and the food)
- Social Media - psychological pricing (using advertisements and social media to get the idea of going to Atomic Cowboy to more people using strategies like charm pricing)

Pricing Strategy

Pizza Chain:	Average Cost of Best-Selling Item:
Atomic Cowboy	-$25.95 for 26in Pizza - No Promotions/Coupons
